'VEST POCKET' VOTING MAKES ELECTION RESULT MATTER OF GUESS

Many Uncommunicative Electors Come to the Polls With Ballots Made Out and No Hint of Make-up.

MAYORALTY SAID TO HINGE ON THE BONDS

Tingley and Switzer Said to Be Leading Republican Rivals, and Hughes Regarded as Republican Sure Thing.

With something more than 1,500 votes cast in general elections, and about 100 ballots in hand, voters up to this time, the result of the election was a matter of guess. The polls closed at 5:30 p.m. this afternoon when a Herald reporter made a round of the polls.

At that time there was a general impression among the candidates that the vote of the voters would be a matter of guess. The voters were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls.

What the vote of the voters would be could not be known at the time the election was held. The voters were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls.

In all the wards the large percentage of voters who came to the polls were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls.

At 2:30 o'clock the total vote in each ward was as follows: First, 200; Second, 200; Third, 200; Fourth, 200. The figures are not absolutely correct, but the total vote at that time was not much over 1,200. Several hours of balloting remained and there was plenty of time for the voters to bring out their ballots to the polls.

The total vote in the wards at 2:30 was about 100. They were distributed something like this: First, 100; Second, 100; Third, 100; Fourth, 100. The figures are not absolutely correct, but the total vote at that time was not much over 1,200.

While the heads of the ticket were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls, they were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls. They were not in the habit of making up their minds before they went to the polls.
